Trees on either side of the pathway.
Markers in stone,
on the ground.
Dead leaves.
To the chapel.

And the distant sounds
of a softball game.
These senses surround me, also,
reflection,
self-reflection.

Who were the people here before me?
Did they stand here, too?
What did they think about?

The beautiful breeze,
the buzzing of bees,
the flowers on ground.

As alone as I,
as introspective.

Down this path,
my reflection goes.

Patmos Lyric #4 by Anne Babson

Anne Babson speaking at Hiwassee
07 November 2018

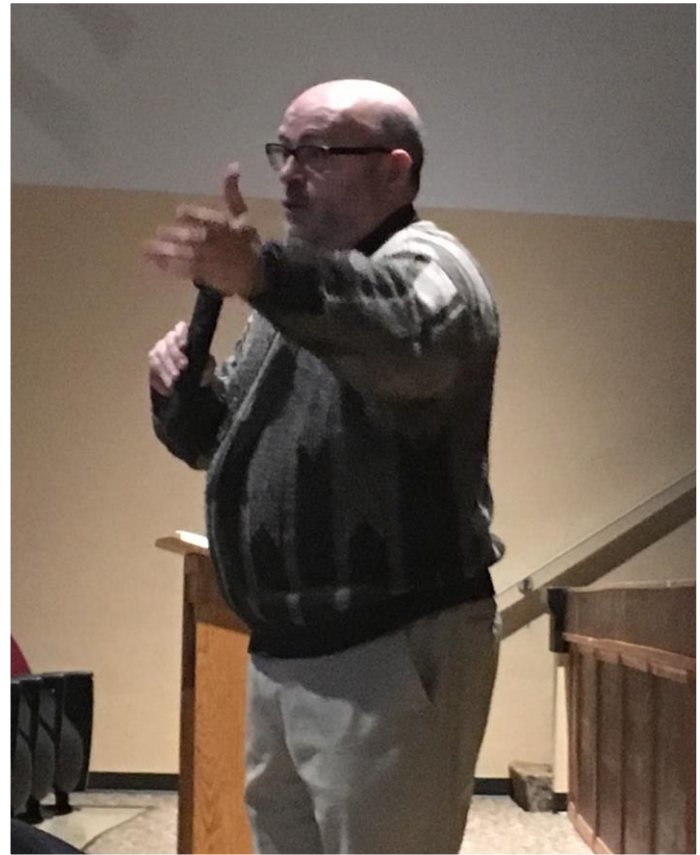

I write this naked, crouching rocks over sticks in
The mud. My flesh-sweat stinks of fish I net
In the shallows. I await Revelation -
When Christ crouched in the dust and wrote in the sand Near
The captured adulestress, He waited like this
For words to transform the dirt into a solid Epistle. The woman wept. Men with rocks shifted Weight, clenched and unclenched, copper and salt of Blood on their tongues. But those earth clods understood Waiting for languages is a virgin pregnancy.
The surface seems inert, dire even, but when scratched
Just so, water and land get rightly divided.
The Creator proclaims in Aleph, Bet, "Light be,"
And behold, there is light. Rocks from clenched fists drop.
Woman loses her accusers. The ground upholds
Her bare feet running away.

This poem was recited by Anne Babson during the reading.

“If you haven’t experienced grief, that’s good.”

The screen turned sideways.
Modern problems require modern solutions.

You may think working in a library would be boring. Far from it. Aiding students with assignments may not always be easy or fun, but the satisfaction of seeing those same people come back with the news that their teachers loved their work is always worth it. We shared so many awful puns, inside jokes, personal stories, and had discussions on almost every topic imaginable. I worked in the library for two semesters. I'd happily do it again.
